Strathbogie Sustainable Forestry Alliance

PRESENTS...

A Night Walk

The Strathbogie Forestry Alliance invites you to join us for a yummy bowl of soup with bread, out in the forest, then come on a fascinating guided night walk. We'll look for nocturnal wildlife in the Spectacular Strathbogie Forest (gliding possums, bats, koalas and more).

When: Friday Night 26th September

Where: Meet @ 6.00 pm, Strathbogie Memorial Hall

Cost: Free

Fairly easy walking conditions - suitable for young and old.

No Dogs Please

Coming up at the Euroa Library

Den or Dan? by Donmil

With a state election coming up,
I'm trying not to panic
At the dismal choice confronting me:
Hindenburg or Titanic?

Technology for Oldies (Heather Cousland)

I have been spending time with a close friend who has cancer. She is living in the Dandenongs and her main support person is another close friend aged 75yrs. Neither of these dear women uses a computer or a smart phone or an iPad. My ill friend has managed to switch her mobile phone to Telstra so she can receive calls independently and she has learned how to read message to text. We also managed to program in caller ID on her phone so she can vet calls.

What has struck me, and been frustrating at times, is to watch my friend become increasingly isolated as her illness progresses. If she was able to use an iPad or laptop she could stay in touch with grandchildren and friends that live a long way away, or who may also be unwell. She could access medical information and resources. There was a recent crisis re treatment options and it took 3 people half an hour to write and send a text message! Whilst there are advantages to not being tech savvy (peace and quiet, time to self etc) this experience has made me think there are some very real benefits from learning how to use technology as we grow older. So saying, I encourage everyone to get with it! (me included)
